◆四、閱讀測驗：18 分(每題 2 分)

Good morning, my friends. Welcome to Thursday Bookworm Time, a great radio program that leads you into a different world of books. I'm Amanda Lin. Today I want to talk about an American writer, Hank Dunning, born in New York in 1942. Before he left his hometown at the age of 22, he had worked as a race horse trainer for many years. Then, he became interested in news and started to work as a reporter. In 1970, Dunning quit and began writing not long after. Then in 1981, he opened a bookstore. In 1992, his friend Michael White, a famous writer, suggested that he should pick up his pen again. Dunning took it and finished his first book The Rules in the same year. As soon as The Rules came out, it became a big hit. The book was so popular that it even won Dunning a prize. After the book, Dunning wrote several books based on the same role Cliff Doway in The Rules. All these books were also very popular. In 2003, one of Dunning's works went on the big screen and set a new ticket office record. Now, let's enjoy some music made for Hank Dunning's movie.
